COMMUNITY CHRISTMAS TREE. FOR NEXT SATURDAY NIGHT--CAROLS TO BE SUNG

OVER 1500 PRESENTS TO BE DISTRIBUTED TO CHILDREN.
EVERYBODY TAKING A HAND.

The Community Christmas Tree suggested several days ago has taken definite shape and one of the grandest and most gorgeous celebrations ever in Lancaster will be pulled off next Saturday night at 5:30 o'clock. Several hundred dollars has been liberally subscribed by the generous people of the city and county and preparations are being consummated to give out over 1,500 presents to all the children in Garrard county, that are twelve years old and under that age. A meeting of the promoters was held in the rooms of The City Club last Friday evening and an organization was soon launched, that put about twenty-five people at work to see that the Community Tree was a decided success. A paper was circulated through the town, asking for donations of money and in a few hours $200. was subscribed, practically everyone asked donating liberally, until about 100 names were on the paper, which goes to prove that it is a Community organization in fact.

About ten chairmans of that many committees were appointed to look after the detail parts of the program. Mr. W. A. Farnau was made the Executive chairman; John M. Farra, Vice chairman and J. J. Walker, Jr., secretary and treasurer. The chairmans of the different departments were: Tree, J. A. Beasley; Decorations, F. S. Hughes; Lights, H. V. Bastin; Soliciting Funds, J. I. Hamilton; Presents, R. T. Embury; Notifying Children, F. M. Tindler; Feeding Park, R. L. Ekin; Telling Santa Claus, W. A. Wheeler; Music, F. H. Hopkins, Court House, David Ross.

The tree has already been erected in the center of the public park, and was gratefully donated by Mr. Henry Cox. It took four men to pull it to town. It will be beautifully illuminated and decorated, several hundred colored electric bulbs having been ordered by Mr. Bastin. The decorations will be gorgeous and artistically arranged all through the entire park.

The tree will be lighted Friday evening and will remain lighted during the entire week and throughout the entire holiday season. Those in charge are especially anxious that every child in the county, be on hand next Saturday night at 5:30 o'clock when the presents will be distributed. "Old Santa" will be on hand and see to it that not a single child is overlooked. The music committee has had printed several hundred pamphlets, of the songs that will be sung on that eventful evening, by a choir that is now practicing every night, under the supervision of Mrs. May Hughes Noland.

A meeting of the workers and the chairmans of the different departments was held at the court house last night and the finishing touches were put on the program, which promises to go through without a single hitch. The committee on music reported that it had secured the services of the Danville brass band, which will be on hand early in the evening, several local people having offered their cars to transport the band over from Danville and back.

The distribution of the presents will begin promptly at 5:30 and it is earnestly requested that all the children of the city and county, 12 years old and under, be on hand at that time.

Should the weather be very bad, the presents will be distributed in the court house. Ample provision has been made to take care of 1,500 children, as the funds now have reached about $300.

CIRCUIT COURT

Adjourns With Dockets Practically Cleared

The three weeks term of the November circuit court came to a close last Saturday, which left the dockets practically cleared. But for the case against the I. & N. railroad which took up about ten days of the session, the docket could have been handled in much less time. After serving the allotted time of six days the grand jury adjourned returning in all about 21 indictments mostly for misdemeanors. The jury in the case of George Conn against the I. & N. railroad who sued for $2,000 damages caused by the flood of March 1915, it being charged that on account of the buttments of the bridge, the water was turned from its original course, through the property of Conn, the jury after several days consultation, finally returned a verdict in favor of Conn, allowing him $1,000. The defendants prayed for an appeal, which was granted. Fred Emerson, notorious as a whiskey seller, was fined $100 and given 40 days in jail and disfranchised for three years. Bill Farris charged with bootlegging, was fined $50, and given ten days in jail for good measure. Another indictment hangs over Mr. Farris for the same offense.

The Christmas spirit in the air and it is doubtful if any town of its size in the state has made more elaborate preparations for the holidays than our own. Hundreds of sacks of candy, apples, oranges and nuts will be given away at the municipal tree, situated in the park Saturday night. All children 12 years old and under will receive these gifts.

At this season of the year the one great thought that throbs in the heart of every unselfish person is what can I give my friends to increase their happiness? It is only a crabbed, sordid soul at this crowning summit of the year who asks what am I going to receive. Children expect to receive and are happy in the thought, but rightly balanced adults find their chief pleasure in giving.

The glad, joyous, festive time draws near and unnumbered hearts are beating in delightful anticipation. The holly and evergreen hang in festoons, and the wonderful municipal tree has been placed in the park with its countless lights and decorations. Let hearts expand, sympathies enlarge and good will reign. Let the men, women and children of Lancaster get together as never before.

The south has long followed the customs of Merry England in the matter of bringing in from wood and field the beautiful Christmas greens with which to give home and church festive air; but from the pine lands of Maine to the mistletoe haunts of California, from the creeping ground-pines of northern Wisconsin to the high parasite greens down in Hawaii, we all have learned how to keep Christmas. Poor indeed is the house that does not show Christmas green in the window, hang holly over the picture of some beloved absent one.

SCHOOLER'S SALE.

The sale of land, live stock and implements of R. C. Schooler will take place at the farm near Paint Lick next Wednesday December 27th. An error last week made our type say Dec. 21st when it should have been the 27th. The sale will be a big one and those wishing to purchase anything in this line should read the advertisement in this issue.

J. H. CLARK

Announces For Magistrate In This District.

On the editorial page of this issue appears the official announcement of J. H. Clark, for the office of Magistrate of the first district of Garrard county. The class or standing of a community is invariably judged by its officers, and there is no more important office in the county than that of Magistrate.

Mr. Clark is among those who is one of the most prominent and efficient workers for the party in the county. He has never before asked for public office, although he and his family connection are all Democrats to the core and are always working for the best interests of the party. While it will be new and an untried office for him, he promises if nominated and elected to give it his personal attention, always looking to the best interest of the county's welfare. Born and raised in the county, thoroughly honest, his friends believe he is particularly qualified to fill the important office to which he aspires. He asks your support and will appreciate anything you may say for him. Mr. Clark is the present committeeman from the West Park precinct, a position he has held for a number of years.

Little Miss Mamie Jordan is up at Pineville to visit her grand-parents, Rev. and Mrs. R. F. Jordan thru Xmas. Her parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Jordan, plan to join her there for the season's festivities.

Recently we had business at Little Hickman, and Mr. Jones L. Anderson, who was on his way to Lancaster, kindly offered us passage over in his speedy touring car, which we gladly accepted. Upon arriving in Lancaster he continued without stopping till we reached the Kentucky river thus giving us Bible measure of accommodation. That night we were very hospitably entertained by Mr. and Mrs. Joe Duncan, this side of Camp Nelson. They are certainly fine folks and make a fellow feel at home. On our return next day Mr. J. E. Sherrow, of the Mt Olive section, with his family, gave us auto passage to Lancaster. We have since learned Mrs. Sherrow is a relative of ours.

The Drake's Creek neighborhood was thrown into intense excitement when it was learned that the little four-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Chris. Weyler was lost late Sunday afternoon. A general search was instituted by the neighbors and continued until about dark when he was found safe and well at the home of the Crank family about three-quarters of a mile distant. When Mrs. Weyler missed her child, shortly after dinner, she concluded that the little one had followed his father to the tobacco barn on the back side of the farm. Upon Mr. Weyler's return about four o'clock the good lady was terrified when told the child had not been with Mr. Weyler. He was also badly frightened to learn the babe had been so long absent with nothing known of its whereabouts. An uncovered cistern, the creek, and nearby dangerous places were immediately searched. After a considerable search the little one was found at the Crank home warm and snug and being amused by playthings by members of the family.

PEANUTS FOR PROFIT.

Rapid Increase of This Product in Last Decade.

No one knows where the peanut originated. The family history of the popular and ever present "goober" has been traced to tropical America, but there it was lost. Peanuts were introduced into the United States shortly after the Mayflower landed, or at least in the early colonial days, but did not become of commercial importance until a few years after the close of the civil war.

During the last ten years the production and use of peanuts have increased rapidly. Thousands of bushels are now shipped for use in the manufacture of confections and food products, including peanut butter. The value of the peanut crop in the United States in 1915 was $18,000,000 and is now considerably higher in value.

As a money crop and for feeding on the farm the peanut is especially desirable where conditions are suitable. A growing season lasting for at least ninety days, and preferably from 110 to 120 days, is necessary. A long season without frost, a comparatively light rainfall during the growing period and a high temperature are necessary.

The soil should be of a sandy, loamy nature, preferably of a light or grayish color. Dark soils have a tendency to discolor the shells and reduce the market value of the crop. However, when the crop is being fed to stock the staining of the shells is of little importance. A well drained clay subsoil is best, but the crop may be grown under a wide range of soil conditions. A reasonable amount of humus and a soil that is sweet are desirable. Lime should be used when needed to correct the acidity of soils in which peanuts are to be grown.

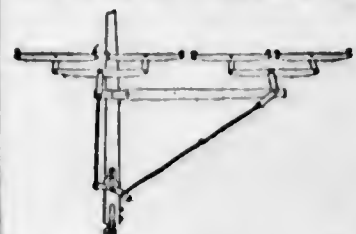

Peanuts should be grown in rotation with other crops, rather than as a specialty. The cropping system, the time for plowing and the preparation of the soil will depend somewhat upon the rotation, but peanuts do best when they follow some well cultivated crop which has been kept free from weeds. When barnyard manure is available it should be applied to some other crop in the rotation system and fertilizers used with the peanuts. This is because the use of manure has a tendency to bring on weeds and to interfere with the best growth of the crop. A fertilizer adapted to the production of either Irish or sweet potatoes is generally suited for the growing of peanuts. The rate of application and the analysis will depend partly upon the fertility of the soil and the amount of fertilizer applied to other crops in the rotation system. Drilling in the fertilizer gives better results than scattering it broadcast, as it is important that the fertilizer be thoroughly mixed with the soil.

As a farm crop the peanut is valuable in that it is a legume, with the same power of gathering nitrogen as clover, alfalfa and other similar crops. However, it should be borne in mind that in order to benefit the soil the main portion of the roots should be left in the soil and the tops fed to the stock on the farm. If the vines are carefully handled during the curing process and then put in the barn, or at least out of the rain, the straw will have a feeding value about equal to clover hay.

For market purposes where the peanuts are to be roasted and sold, the large varieties, including Virginia Bunch and Virginia Runner, are in great demand. The smaller varieties, including the Spanish, North Carolina and Tennessee Red, are grown and shelled before selling. The Spanish is to be preferred when peanuts are grown exclusively for feeding purposes. The Spanish variety can also be grown under a much broader range of conditions than the larger varieties and require a shorter season. While the average yield is only about thirty-five bushels per acre, with the proper methods a yield of sixty bushels per acre and from one ton or more of forage may be secured. Figuring the value of a ton of vines at from $8 to $10 and sixty bushels of peanuts worth $40 to $50 the income per acre should be around $50 to $70 and the net income from $30 to $50.—Melvin Hyler.

Use a Tongue Truck.

A Missouri subscriber asks for a sketch of a four horse evener to be used on a binder so that one horse walks on one side of the tongue and the other three on the other. The evener must be constructed so there will be no side draft.

Unless a tongue truck is used it is impossible to eliminate all side draft. A tongue truck will carry the side draft and also eliminate neck weight. The sketch shows one method of constructing a four horse evener that enables the horses to work on a binder in the manner specified. Such an evener is obviously rather complex and is hardly to be attempted in a homemade way.—Farm Progress.

For Better Farming.

Sixty-seven state agricultural colleges and experiment stations are devoted to the development of agriculture. Their endowment, plant and equipment amount to $100,000,000. They have an income of more than $35,000,000, with 5,500 teachers and a resident student body of over 75,000.

SHEEP RAISING.

In his annual report, just prepared, the secretary of agriculture recommends that sheep be raised more extensively as a source of meat and wool and also as a means of using much of the waste land on farms. He points out that in the United States only one in seven farms of over twenty acres now supports sheep, with an average of one sheep of shearing age to three acres of land. The 300,000 pounds of wool now imported annually, he says, could be secured from 200,000 sheep, and this number could be added to our stock if a fourth of the remaining farms sustained one sheep for each three acres. The report also discusses the development which has taken place in the dairy industry and calls attention to the fact that cheese making, which heretofore has been limited to certain sections, can be extended successfully to the mountain regions of the south, to the valleys of the Rocky mountains and to many sections of the Pacific coast.

THE NITRATE QUESTION.

Action by Government to Lower the Cost of This Fertilizer.

The present shortage of farm labor—attributed by many to the high wage attraction of the munition factories—emphasizes the fact that labor costs on American farms are on the upgrade. Reports have been made of hundreds of acres of sugar beets being plowed up because workers could not be secured to harvest them, and similar conditions have prevailed with respect to fruit and grain crops.

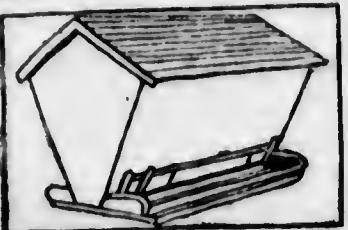

It is becoming evident that to make a profit bigger yields must be obtained from every acre, so that the same amount of work given to the care of the crops as at present will bring in a bigger production to overcome the increased expenditure for labor. When we realize that the wheat average of Europe, for example, is thirty-two bushels per acre, while ours is but fifteen bushels, it can be seen that we can make this increase.

According to Dr. H. H. Harkeland, one of the foremost scientists in the country, past president of several of the leading scientific societies and a member of both the naval consulting board and the nitrate plant committee of the American Academy of Sciences, this can be accomplished through cheap fertilizer. At present, he pointed out in a talk before the committee on agriculture of the United States senate, the American farmer cannot use fertilizer to the extent in which it is used in Germany, Belgium and other countries of high crop yields per acre, because the difference in the cost is such that the extra gain in crops is outweighed by the cost of the additional fertilizer. When the air nitrate plant authorized by congress at its last session at the request of the National Grange and the Farmers' union is established it will produce a large quantity of high grade nitrogenous fertilizer at a cost estimated to be 50 per cent below that of present fertilizers, putting American farmers on the same basis as those of other countries. This plant, according to the provisions of the act, is to be owned and operated exclusively by the government, so that there will be no danger of a private monopoly. It is intended that in case of war the nitrates will be used in ammunition, in which nitric acid is a prime essential and for which the country is now dependent upon the nitrates of Chile.

Dr. Harkeland's statement discussing conditions in Belgium and Germany included the following: "The yield per acre for many crops is almost proportionate within certain limits to the amount of nitrogen fertilizer consumed; in fact, these limits do not seem to have been reached, from the fact that fertilizer costs money, and naturally there arrives a point where it does not pay the farmer to use more. As soon as you cheapen the cost you give the farmer a chance to realize upon his labor by increasing his yields per acre. If this is important in countries like Belgium and Germany, where farm labor is incomparably cheaper than it is in the United States, it is almost self evident that it becomes much more important in a country where labor is scarce and expensive."

A Self Feeder For Hogs.

It is claimed that the self fed hog is able enough to balance its own ration. The self feeder illustrated here is substantially built from selected hard woods, well painted outside and airtight. Hard wood skids with iron hooks at each end permit moving it easily from place to place. It will accommodate forty or fifty growing hogs or from sixty to eighty growing pigs.

Rocky Mountain Locusts Quiescent. There has not been a serious general outbreak of the Rocky mountain locust since 1890, and this particular grasshopper has ceased to be a pest of any great importance.

PEACH BUDS WINTER KILLED.

Those on Young Trees More Apt to Be Injured.

The fact that the peach is not perfectly hardy in this climate makes the question of winter killing a perennial one in the mind of the orchardist. Hardiness of bud, as we term it, is dependent upon several factors. The one receiving greatest consideration is varietal difference. It is that which we consider in the selection of varieties for the orchard. The susceptibility of a variety to winter killing of the buds varies somewhat, however, according to the age of the tree. As a general rule it will be found that the buds on young trees are more apt to be injured than those on more mature trees.

In Ohio winter hardness does not mean so much resistance to low temperatures as it does resistance to the effects of the "January thaw," which starts the buds into life only to leave them at the mercy of the next moderately cold snap. That the varieties behave differently under various conditions we have reason to feel confident.

The Fitzgerald is a case in point. This peach originated in Canada and bears a reputation there for extreme hardness. Here while hardy it is not conspicuously so. The difference is that the Canadian winter is one of continued steady cold, varied by warmer weather, but without the high temperatures produced by the winter sun in Ohio. Here it is not unusual for us to have a week in late January or early February in which the temperature for several consecutive days reaches 50 or 60 degrees F. during midday.

Thus it would seem that the relative hardness of varieties for a winter continuously cold might be extremely different from that for a variable winter.

Storing Sweet Potatoes.

When first placed in the storage house sweet potatoes should be cured by being kept by the use of a fire in a temperature of from 80 to 90 degrees F. This curing temperature should be maintained for from ten days to two weeks and should then be gradually reduced to about 55 degrees and kept at as near this point as possible. After this the ventilators should be left open during the day in clear, warm weather and kept closed during the night and in damp or rainy weather. When the temperature in the house goes below 50 degrees F. the house should be opened if the outside temperature is higher or a fire should be started to raise the temperature to the desired point since once the potatoes have become thoroughly chilled their quality is impaired and they are more susceptible to decay. In order to maintain the proper temperatures farmers should install accurate thermometers in their storage houses.

Destroying Grasshoppers.

By the use of hopperdozers as many as 300 bushels of grasshoppers have been collected on 100 acres of alfalfa.

ON SHEEP FEEDING.

C. G. Starr, an authority on sheep feeding and who buys and feeds several thousand lambs each year gives the following advice as a result of his long experience:

To be a successful feeder requires more use of brains than any other line of agriculture.

The successful feeder must be on the watch for things to happen in the pens. Care in being punctual with breakfast for lambs will do wonders.

No one ever made sheep fat by starving them.

Lambs really do best in dry lots when the feeding begins too late to use green blades of corn and grass. They have a disposition to wander and will not stay with the feed unless more or less closely confined.

Enough troughs should be provided for grain feeding so that all can get all the grain they desire.

The water should always be fresh and clean. Have plenty of it in enough troughs so that sheep can easily drink. Plenty of corn is always needed. Cottonseed meal is very useful, especially when silage is used. A pound of silage per head per day is about enough.

$5,000 Insurance Money

By M. QUAD
Copyright, 1916, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate

When Henry Davis was told by the doctor that he was on his dying bed he called his wife, Emilee, to him and said:

"Emilee, we have no landed property, but I have got $5,000 insurance on my life which will be paid to you within a few weeks. It is quite a sum for you to handle. You have no business head on you. You never even bought a wash dish of a tin peddler without being cheated. I have had to attend to all the mending and buying because you were like a child. You will be advised to do this and that, and you will not know whose advice to take. I feel much troubled about it."

"I shall get along all right, and you needn't worry," replied the wife. Henry Davis died a day after his talk with his wife and there were scores of people in the village in which he had lived for twenty years who predicted just what he had feared—that his wife did not know how to handle such a sum of money.

Three months had gone past, and she had made no investment yet that any one had heard of, when she suddenly left her home, explaining that she was going on a visit to distant relatives. It was known that she drew her $5,000 out of the bank and took it along.

The village of Lincolnville had been slowly dying for the last five years and had now reached the point where everybody said that something must be done.

Things were in this state of affairs at Lincolnville when the stage from the nearest railroad point drove up to the tavern one day at noon. The landlord of the hostelry was asleep in his chair in the office. A loud call from the driver of the stage aroused him and he came to his door just as a little woman was descending from the stage. "Can you give me accommodations for three or four weeks?" she asked.

"I guess I can," he replied. "I want two rooms," she went on. "and both of them large ones. Is there any place in this town where I can buy a desk and a table?"

He showed her two connected rooms and she accepted them at once and told him what changes she wanted in the future. Then she asked him to have the editor of the weekly paper call upon her on a business matter and she gave him her name as Mrs. Davis.

Next morning after her arrival little Mrs. Davis, who had never bought or sold a dollar's worth of anything in her life, was busy turning out copy for the editor and trying her hand at circulars and advertisements. When the Lincolnville Tribune came out on its regular day of issue there was something like excitement when it contained a whole page of advertisements of what was in store for the town. Mrs. Davis wanted real estate. She wanted vacant property by the lot or by the acre.

There were a large number of landowners who were cheerfully willing to sell. They offered her lots and tracts, and they came in such numbers that some of them had to wait outside the door. To the surprise of the would-be sellers, Mrs. Davis seemed to know a good deal about what real estate was worth in Lincolnville. She beat their figures down about one-half, and as soon as the deeds could be made out the seller had his cash. Then another announcement appeared in the paper. It was a query of why three railroads should not make a junction at Lincolnville. It was a logical point for a railroad junction and for railroad shops that would bring 3,000 workmen to the town.

There was a second query—Why shouldn't the government be asked to deepen the river until steamboats could come up from the bay, twenty miles away? The government would do it if the right influence was brought about.

In the next big advertisement of the Tribune was notice of an auction sale on a certain date. Mrs. Davis would resell all her lots to the highest bidders. The next batch of circulars sent out contained the next announcement and the further query:

Will you take $50 worth of stock in a street railway from Lincolnville to Buffalo? The distance is twenty miles to a thickly populated region, and it is figured that the dividends on this stock will not be less than 20 per cent. Get in while you can!

During the week preceding the auction more than 1,000 strangers appeared in Lincolnville. More than 100 had personal interviews with the Widow Davis. When auction day arrived there were 2,000 men ready to bid. The widow was her own auctioneer, and in the space of two hours she had sold land that had cost her $15,000 for the sum of $16,000.

And Mrs. Davis planned a false boom for Lincolnville, and was the town to be left deadlier than before? That was suspected by a good many people, but it did not turn out so. There had been great need of something to lift the town out of its slough. She filled the need. A boom set in in fact, and though it did not secure all the railroads and factories mentioned, it added 5,000 to its population in the next two years and is today one of the smartest cities in the state. It has not yet raised a monument to the little widow, but the idea has more than once entered the minds of the older citizens, most of whom were sound asleep the day she descended from the stage and gave the landlord such a jolt.

Prince Albert gives smokers' such delight, because

- its flavor is so different and so delightfully good;
- it can't bite your tongue;
- it can't parch your throat;
- you can smoke it as long and as hard as you like without any comeback but real tobacco happiness!

On the reverse side of every Prince Albert package you will read:

"PROCESS PATENTED JULY 30th, 1907"

That means to you a lot of tobacco enjoyment. Prince Albert has always been sold without coupons or premiums. We prefer to give quality!

PRINCE ALBERT

A UNIQUE ROBBERY

By WILLIAM CHANDLER

From time to time some young man appears in the criminal world who from the pranks he plays, his daring and the cell-like way he slips through the fingers of the police excites the admiration of such as are prone to read crime novels.

Such a one many years ago turned up in Italy in the person of Giuseppe Vampa.

In Vampa's day most of the thieves was due in the diligence or the post chaise, one day a diligence left Bologna for Florence. Although there were two compartments beside the coupe, but one compartment which would hold six persons was used. It contained four carabinieri, or national policemen, in disguise. Two of them were women's, the other two men's clothing.

Vampa had appeared on the route between Bologna and Florence, turning up suddenly first at one point, then at another, leaving tonight, then in the middle of a quiet town and pouring it into the lap of a poor woman; setting the police beside themselves to place him. A peasant told a carabinieri that Vampa had met him on the road and asked him what hour the diligence reached a certain point. This was taken to mean that the bandit intended to rob it. The next time it passed over the road arrangements were made to capture him.

On reaching a certain point, where houses were few and a young woman, wearing some flowers in her coronet, asked to be taken aboard. Since the diligence was not desirable in an attempt to capture a bandit, her request was refused. She appeared to be very much disappointed, saying that she was anxious to reach her mother, who was very ill. Those in the diligence still refused her and were driven without her. Presently the postman saw that something on top of the diligence was attracting the attention of persons beside the road, and, having pulled up, one of the men got out to see what it was. He saw the girl who had asked for a ride on the top of the coach. She had climbed up unseen by them when they had started from the relay. The leader of the policemen concluded to take her inside.

Despite the fact that she was going to her sick mother, she was very chatty. Before long she had her fellow passengers laughing at her sallies of wit and humor, and they were all quite infatuated with her. The diligence made a long descent before reaching Florence, this part of the road being traveled after dark. The night was chilly, and the girl complained of the cold wind coming in at the windows. Every man hastened to shut them. To show her appreciation of their consideration the girl passed around a box of cigarettes. Every man took one, and the compartment was soon filled with tobacco smoke.

Presently one of the men sank back in his seat, apparently in slumber. Then another succumbed and another till all but one, dressed as a woman remained awake. This person was sitting beside the girl, and suddenly he felt her arm around his neck in a vise-like grip and a bunch of flowers held under his nose, from which he was forced to inhale some peculiar odor. He struggled to free himself and, being a powerful man, succeeded, but only to feel the cold muzzle of a pistol against his cheek.

"Ease your struggles," said the girl, whose voice, now unlightened, was evidently that of a man, "or I will settle you with a bullet in your brain."

"Who are you?" asked the victim.

"Giuseppe Vampa," said the man, backed by the pistol, was quite enough to insure an easy victory, but Vampa's plan was to rob the coach, and to do so unaided he must put this fellow to sleep with the rest. Holding the pistol to his head with one hand, Vampa held the flowers under his nose with the other till he was unconscious. Having thus rendered the whole four unable to resist, he began to go through their pockets. Raising the skirt of the person he had put to sleep with his bouquet, he felt the material of a man's trousers.

"Oh!" he exclaimed, lighting a match. "We have a party of carabinieri. I am pleased to meet you, my fine fellows, but I shall make no great haul."

In this he was right. Not more than 50 lire were obtained from the whole party.

When he had done all he cared to do he put his head out the window and called upon the postilion to stop, that he might light. The man, ignorant of what had taken place, obeyed.

"Goodly," he said to the postilion. "Give my compliments to the good people of Florence and tell them that I shall pay them a visit soon."

The postilion, wondering, cracked his whip over his horses' heads and drove on. He had been told to drive to police headquarters on reaching Florence, and he did so. No one inside the diligence seemed inclined to leave it, so he was about to open the door when the chief of police, seeing the arrival of the expedition of which he was well aware, emerged from his office and opened the door himself. He found four men drugged and in the lap of one their collected funds in a paper on which was written:

Otto it to the poor. GIUSEPPE VAMPA.

"Big Foot" John Engleman, local negro, who is charged with making a murderous assault upon Mitchell Dotson, a Waynesburg cattleman in Macks-ville, about three weeks ago, was arrested at Lebanon Thursday night and brought to this city and placed in jail. He was taken out Monday for trial, but it was postponed. Dotson, was on his way to Lancaster court, when he was knocked in the head and found at a late hour unconscious. He was given medical aid and afterwards taken to Danville hospital, where reports come that he is thought to be recovering. The negro was not seen to do the act, but immediately after the report was circulated that the man was dead, he left town and was not heard of any more until some one saw him at Lebanon and came here and told Chief of Police Carter, who phoned and had him arrested and then went after him.

BUY RED CROSS SEALS.

The Red Cross Christmas Seals are for use. They not only make a package or letter look festive with the gay Santa Claus and the seasonable greetings but wherever and whenever a RED CROSS CHRISTMAS SEAL is seen one knows there is interest taken in and a fight being made against the dreaded disease of tuberculosis. It is a small amount of money that helps a long way, so put seals on all your letters from now until after Christmas and New Year, showing that you believe in the winning fight.

What to do when Backache comes on

"I found immediate relief in the use of Foley Kidney Pills, have recommended them, and do not know of a single instance when they failed to give relief."

C. U. Landrum, a traveling salesman, writes from San Angelo, Texas: "Driving over rough roads and in all kinds of weather gave me acute pains in the back and I suffered greatly. I found relief in the use of Foley Kidney Pills, and before the first bottle was used, the pain in my back had entirely disappeared and I have had no recurrence of those pains which frequently amounted to almost neurologic proportions."

When backache comes on, and it seems as if you can't stand the pain and pressure in your back, you will find quick and grateful relief comes with the use of Foley Kidney Pills. They stop the cause of the pain, ease the stiff aching joints and muscles, and clear the poisons out of your system by helping your kidneys and bladder to normal healthy action.

South France.

Of all parts of France perhaps the Nimes country is the most interesting. Nimes itself, with its Roman amphitheater, still used for circus shows and bull fights, its "Maison Carree," otherwise a perfectly preserved second-century temple, and its beautiful gardens, is a charming place to stay in, though dusty when the mistral blows.

Defining the Heart.

The human heart, always a mystery, has become the subject of further speculation, since a Supreme court Justice decided that "nobody can plumb its depths." It has been described as broad and hollow, and the jurist says, in effect, that it is bottomless. One is almost driven to the conclusion that, as was the world before the first heart began to beat, it is "without form and void."

Saloniki's Old Churches.

The finest remains of the ancient city of Saloniki are its churches. How they ever survived the tempests of the Middle Ages is a miracle. Nevertheless they did, 22 of them. And they stand today, turned back into churches after their 500 years of use as mosques, illustrating the story of Byzantine ecclesiastical architecture even more beautifully, in certain ways, than those of Constantinople. Moreover, they make up among them a museum of the lost Byzantine art of mosaic, unrivaled save in Constantinople and Ravenna.

Under the auspices of the Woman's Club and through the kindness of Mr. W. J. Roman's, that wonderful Marguerite Clark will appear in "Molly Make-Believe" at the Opera House next Wednesday night. The members of the Woman's club are anxious to fill the opera house on that evening and earnestly solicit your attendance.

MULES HIGH AND IN GOOD DEMAND.

A number of mule sales are reported in the last few days and at present there seems to be quite a demand for extra good ones, as well as for the more medium grades, for army purposes. Mr. W. B. Burton is in the market for the latter and is carrying an advertisement in every issue of the Record.

He purchased several head at Somerset last Monday, ranging in price, from $100 to $150. Center Brothers sold recently, to Herbert Ellis, of Wilson, N. C., nine head at an average of $178.50 a head, and a pair of mare mules to W. B. Burton for $350 and a team of horse mules to him for which he paid $250. W. V. Gastineau sold a dandy horse mule to R. E. Gaines of Lincoln, for $250.

NOTICE TO THE PUBLIC.

All persons suffering with Trachoma, a contagious eye disease (called Granulated Lids) in Garrard county can get treatment free at any one of the three United States Public Health Service Trachoma Hospitals. Any Kentuckian whether adult or child who has Trachoma, can get both treatment and medicine free also a stay in the hospital if necessary free of charge. These three hospitals open to Trachomaceous Kentuckians are located at Pikeville, in Pike county; Jackson, in Breathitt county; London, Ky., in Laurel county. For information apply by letter or in person to the medical director at any one of these hospitals that you may select. The law will be enforced to exclude pupils and teachers suffering with Trachoma from Kentucky schools. For further information call on, Dr. J. M. ACTON, County Health Officer, Lancaster, Ky.

A CHRISTMAS STOCKING FROM THE RECORD.

It almost is Christmas. We hardly can wait to hang up the stockings alongside the grate. A bustle and sparkle pervades all around; the fir trees are cut and there's a snow on the ground. The children, excited and thrilled with delight, are dreaming of Santa Claus all through the night. They wake up and listen to the sound on the roof which is to their fancies a reindeer's wee hoof. The old folks, more eager than even the tots, are burning with secrets and brimming with plots. Mince pies in the pantries delicious and sweet of mother's own making are ready to eat. It almost is Christmas; St. Nick in his sleigh all loaded with treasures is coming this way. His reindeer are flying; a day or two more and down through the chimney he'll bound to the floor. And then if the stockings are not in their place, in sorrow he'll vanish and leave not a trace. So hang up the stockings by chimneys with care the night before Christmas; St. Nick will be there.

ROSS.

Mrs. Forrest Denton Ross, daughter of Russell Denton and Almira Harris Denton, was born in Garrard county, Kentucky, December 23rd 1885, and died at the P. A. C. Infirmary in Richmond, Ky., December 8, 1916.

Mrs. Ross inherited the splendid qualities of mind and heart which are so characteristic of her family. Since her marriage to Mr. Louis Ross she has resided in Kirksville, Ky, and their was truly a happy home life, only interrupted when she was stricken with typhoid fever some weeks since. Becoming convalescent it was thought she might improve more rapidly if she had a change of surroundings. So she was brought to Richmond for a short stay with a relative, but growing worse was taken to the P. A. C. Infirmary until last Friday after much suffering, her pure spirit was liberated from its earthly element. She was so brave, so patient, and even after a paroxysm of pain, she would look and smile at her loved ones and the faithful nurse. The sympathy of the community goes out to the young husband, the aged father and devoted sisters who were with her to the last.

Mrs. Ross was a member of the Christian church at Kirksville, and she will be greatly missed from the membership. Funeral services were held at the residence of her relatives, the Misses Duerson, on Breck avenue, Sunday, December 10, and were conducted by Rev. William Eldridge, of Paint Lick. A large number of sympathizing friends assembled to pay their last respect to a dearly loved one, and there were beautiful floral offerings, breathing of the Resurrection Morn, and the life eternal.

Be comforted dear friends, for the Savior has said: "Blessed are the pure in heart, for they shall see God." Although the body is quietly resting in the Richmond cemetery, He has said: "Be thou faithful unto death, and I will give thee a crown of life."

Besides her husband, Mrs. Ross is survived by her aged father and six sisters. They are Mrs. Samuel Rout, Portland Oregon; Mrs. S. D. Cochran, and Mrs. V. A. Lear, Lancaster; Mrs. W. S. Fish, Stanford; Mrs. J. Walker Guyn, Paint Lick, and Mrs. Philip Pettus, Harlan. Mrs. Mays. —Richmond Climax-Madisonian.

LETTER FROM FORMER GARRARD MAN.

R. J. Hukie, proprietor of a fruit and stock farm at Peck Kanaas, writes us the following letter which will be of interest to old friends.

"Dear Sir:—Through the kindness of a lady friend in Richmond Ky, I am just in receipt of a copy of The Central Record of Nov. 30, 1916, and, as I was brought up at Buckeye, Ky, naturally local items from Buckeye and Teatersville in The Record are very interesting to me, especially so, was the write-up of the uncle James Sanders reception—"92 Years, 92 Guests". Forty-five years ago I was associated with Uncle James Sanders in church work at old Republican church in Garrard county, near the mouth of Sugar Creek.

Inclosed please find Postal Money order for $1. for which please send me the Record, Peck Kanaas.

Yours truly, R. J. Hukie."

"BIBI."

One of the prettiest and best plays ever staged at the High School Auditorium, was the one on last Tuesday night, "The Bibi Play", given by Mrs. W. R. Todd's expression class and other members of the Graded and High School.

The play was in the form of a Doll Shop, and the "Handsome Men" and "Beautiful girls", played their part to perfection which goes to show that they were well trained, and their instructor, Mrs. Todd, and the members of the play deserve much credit for the manner in which they so graciously presented the play. The writer of this article would be glad to mention each character's name but owing to the fact that we are shy of space we cannot. Miss Ruth Carrier played the part of the "Nigger Doll" and played it well.

A large crowd was out to see the play but for the fact that the weather was bad, they would have had a crowded house.

THE HOUSEWIFE GETS HER MONEY'S WORTH.

Time was when the housewife practiced loose methods in purchasing her foodstuffs.

But not in this age of the high cost of living. Today she practices business methods, and she makes it a point to get her money's worth.

In her selection of foodstuffs she devotes much thought. She studies the food market and familiarizes herself with the different brands of foods.

When she strikes the right article she sticks to it. She wants the best at the lowest cost and she gets it—she follows the right methods of selection.

The housewife should give careful consideration to the baking powder, tea, coffee, flour and other similar foods if she is to get full value for her money.

There is always one best brand in every line, and it is the housewife's duty to find that brand.

Some women prefer one kind of Baking Powder while other women demand a different kind. There is one Baking Powder that has been on the market for years—Calumet—which apparently from its steady sales and increased popularity, hits the happy medium and pleases every housewife no matter what her demands.

In purchasing foods be sure that you practice caution and you'll get the best

PRETTY WOMAN TELLS SECRETS

Reveals How She Won Sparkling Eyes and Rosy Cheeks.

"TANLAC DID IT" SHE SAYS

Mrs. Lewis C. Starr, of Cleveland, Confides to Admiring Friends How She Got Healthy Color Back—"How Well You Are Looking", They Exclaim. Cheerful and Happy, Too.

If you suffer from nervousness so badly that you can't sleep at night; if your complexion is pale and muddy, your eyes have dark rings under them and life hardly seems worth living—

And—If you want rosy cheeks, clear, sparkling eyes, restful sleep at night, bounding red blood and perfect health—Just take "Tanlac."

This is the advice of Mrs. Florence Starr, of 1780 East 88th st., Cleveland. She is a charming young matron, wife of Lewis C. Starr, of the Robbins Conveying Itel Co. Mrs. Starr is a living picture of the value of her advice.

MRS. LEWIS C. STARR, Who Attributes Rosy Cheeks to Tanlac.

Restored to Health.

Mrs. Starr says that Tanlac has done more for her health than any remedy she ever tried before. She said:

"I consider the day I heard of Tanlac the luckiest one of my life. I never knew before how much good a medicine could do in such a short time.

"I was all run down. I suffered from dizzy spells and sometimes a kind of falling sensation.

Could Get No Rest.

"I would toss and roll all night and seemed to get no rest from my fitful sleep. My appetite was indifferent; no matter how attractive a meal I would sit down to, my stomach seemed to turn against it immediately. I was so nervous that even the slamming of a door would upset me and make me tremble.

"I tried many remedies and kinds of treatment until one day a woman friend persuaded me to try this Tanlac.

Relief Came at Once.

"Within a week I began to feel better. The dizzy spells left me and I slept better. I found that in the mornings I would awake feeling cheerful and happy, and with a hearty appetite for breakfast. Color came back into my cheeks and my friends began to speak of how well I looked.

"Today I suffer no more from nervousness and everything in life seems brighter. The day I first heard of Tanlac was the luckiest one of my life."

Tanlac is being introduced in Lancaster at R. E. McRoberts.

Tanlac may be obtained in the nearby cities. Paint Lick, J. N. Metcalf; Bryantville, Becker & Ballard; Little Hickman, Collier and Bruner; Berea, S. E. Welch; Stanford, Penny's Drug Store; Junction City, Reynolds and Evans; Richmond, H. L. Perry & Son; Crab Orchard, Lyne Bros.; Burgin, G. T. Schofield; Danville, John S. Wells; Lancaster, R. E. McRoberts, and W. C. West, Silver Creek. (Adv)

To Keep Plants Fresh.

There is a simple way to water ferns and flowers which will be of interest to one who must leave them for a time without care. Take a washing tub and place three or four bricks in it and put about two inches of water in the tub. Place the flowers on these bricks and place the tub where they can get the morning sunshine.

Mr. Solomon Childers died Wednesday afternoon at the home of his sister, Mrs. D. M. Montgomery after a lingering illness of several months, due to the infirmities of old age. Mr. Childers was 83 years of age and a native of Garrard Co. where he had spent his entire life with the exception of fifteen years when he resided in Illinois. He was well known and liked by every one who knew him. He was a member of the Masonic Lodge and one of its most useful members. At a very early age he united with the Baptist church and lived a consistent Christian life. The funeral services were conducted Thursday afternoon at the Methodist church by his pastor, Rev. J. W. Mahan, assisted by the Rev. Moore of Lawrenceburg, who was an old acquaintance of Mr. Childers. The body was taken to his old home in Illinois for burial by the side of his wife who died there a number of years ago. Dr. B. H. Montgomery and Mr. E. C. Montgomery accompanied the remains. He is survived by only one sister, Mrs. D. M. Montgomery and a large number of relatives who have the sympathy of the entire community in their loss.

Miss Patsy Anderson will give a Xmas tree at the Locust Grove School Friday afternoon at 2 o'clock. Miss Emma Walker will also have a tree at the Bourge School Friday evening at 7 p. m.

The people here were greatly shocked on last Tuesday morning when the news went out that Mrs. J. D. McMillan was found dead in bed. She was not well but not thought to be seriously ill. She was Miss Sibyl Montgomery before her marriage, and had resided in this locality most of her life, was 45 years of age. She was a member of the Scott's Fork church. She leaves a husband and six children. Funeral services were conducted at Mt. Hebron church Wednesday afternoon by Rev. J. W. Mahan interment in the cemetery here. Much sympathy is expressed the bereaved ones.

Does yours bring joy to the breakfast table?

North — East — South — West — women are solving the coffee problem.

Armies have solved it. "An army travels on its stomach" and of the army breakfast, ask any soldier what he would miss most.

One of the greatest American judges has said that unhappiness in the home comes mences with the first cup of poor coffee. There is a coffee which brings a million men to breakfast "in a hurry."

Today you can introduce its rich, full flavor in your home. Serve Arbuckles' for a week and notice how much more his breakfast means to him. Bring joy to your breakfast table.

Today there are whole towns where Arbuckles is practically the only coffee used. In one State alone, in a year, four pounds of Arbuckles' Coffee was used for every man, woman and child in the State—four times as many pounds of coffee as the population of the State!

SMOKING MEATS ON THE FARM

Proper Methods Aid in Preservation as Well as in Palatability.

[Prepared by United States department of agriculture.]

Proper smoking will not only aid in the preservation of pickled and cured meats, but also will add to their palatability. The preservative effect in smoking is due to the formation of creosote by the combustion of wood, this substance closing the pores of the meat to some extent, thereby excluding the air and also forming a coating objectionable to insects.

The most important dimension of the smokehouse is its height. This should be eight or ten feet to insure best results. The horizontal dimensions should be determined by the amount of meat likely to be smoked, if by a feet being large enough for ordinary farm use. Ample ventilation should be provided to carry off the warm air in order to prevent overheating the meat. Small openings under the eaves or a chimney in the roof will be sufficient if arranged so as to be easily controlled. A fire pot outside of the house proper, with a flue through which the smoke may be conducted to the meat chamber, gives the best conditions for smoking. When this cannot be arranged a fire may be built on the floor of the house, and the meat shielded by a sheet of metal. Where the meat can be hung six or seven feet above the fire, this precaution need not be taken. The construction should be such as to allow the smoke to pass up freely over the meat and out of the house, though rapid circulation is at the expense of fuel.

Brick or stone houses are the best, though the first cost is greater than if they are built of lumber. Large dry goods boxes and even barrels may be made to serve as smokehouses where only small amounts of meat are to be smoked. The care of meat in such substitutes is so much more difficult and the results so much less satisfactory that a permanent place should be provided if possible.

The best fuel for smoking meats is green hickory or maple wood, smooth and with sawdust of the same material. Hard wood of any kind is preferable to soft wood. Hickory woods should never be used, as they are likely to impart bad flavors to the product. Corn cobs are the best substitute for hard wood and may be used if desired. Soft wood and corn cobs give off large amounts of carbon in burning, and this is deposited on the meat, making it dark in color and rank flavored. Juniper berries and fragrant woods are sometimes added to the fire to flavor the meat.

Meat that is to be smoked should be removed from the brine two or three days before being put in the smokehouse. If it has been cured in a strong brine it will be best to soak the pieces in cold water overnight to prevent a crust of salt from forming on the outside when drained. Washing the meat in tepid water and scrubbing clean with a brush is a good practice. The pieces should then be hung up to drain for a day or two. When drained they may be hung in the house. All should be suspended below the ventilators and should hang so that no two pieces come in contact, as this would prevent uniform smoking.

A slow fire may then be started, warming up the meat gradually. During the winter months in cold climates it is best to keep the fire going continually until the smoking is complete, holding the temperature at about the same point. If the fire is allowed to die down the meat becomes cold and the smoke does not penetrate readily. This results in heavy smoke on the outside and very little on the inner portions of the meat. During the spring months and in the summer a light fire may be started every second or third day for two weeks, the meat being allowed to hang in the smokehouse until sufficiently colored. When the fire is kept going steadily and an even temperature is maintained, twenty-four to thirty-six hours will be required to finish one lot of meat. Smoke will not penetrate frozen meat, and it will be necessary to extract all frost from it before drying the house. The house should be kept dark at all times to prevent flies entering. As soon as smoked sufficiently the meat should be cooled by opening the ventilators or doors. When hard and firm it may be canned or packed away for summer use.

Bile Anchors.

These anchors are used to secure wooden stave silos to a concrete base. Two forms are shown, in each of which the arms are at an angle of sixty degrees to each other. They are bolted to each stave and are fastened to large bolts imbedded in the concrete base.—Agricultural Digest.

Winter Tree Protection.

[J. J. Gardner, Colorado station.] There is usually less danger of mice gnawing trees in a cultivated than in a wild orchard. Particularly for young orchards this is one of the best arguments for the practice of cultivation. However, there is always enough danger from mice and rabbits practically everywhere to make it advisable to furnish some kind of protection through the winter.

Several methods are satisfactory. The simplest for mice is to tread the snow with the feet about each tree, being careful not to injure the bark.

Generally something further is necessary. Late in the fall the trees may be wrapped with wood veneer strips.

Quick Cold Relief

Is usually found through the prompt administration of a mildly laxative, dispersive tonic—one that will scatter the inflammation, remove the waste, and help Nature to build up resistance.

Peruna is That Tonic.

Its action is prompt, usually very effective, and its use is without harmful effects. Every household should keep it at hand for this purpose, and every catarrhal sufferer should regularly use this reliable remedy.

The tablet form will be found very convenient. A tablet or two at the very beginning of a cold will frequently prevent its development, and these tablets may be taken regularly with beneficial results.

Daily Thought.

Even in the statistics of life, when we are like pilgrims walking with pens in our shoes, still there is the scent of flowers, the song of the birds and the sweet light of heaven about our path.—Grey.

Ordering Meals Electrically.

An electric system of ordering for lunchrooms, clubs, restaurants and hotels has been devised. You simply press a button which operates an annunciator installed in the kitchen, telling the kitchen hands just what food you want.—Popular Science Monthly.

Benefit of Deep Breathing.

Deep breathing is an excellent preventive against catching cold or will head off one that has just been caught. Everybody ought to take twelve deep breaths every day and do this breathing outside or with windows wide open, be the weather cold, warm, dry, damp, clear or cloudy. Deep breathing is imperative for all smokers, cold sufferers and chilly people.

Thought There Might Be More.

Twins had arrived at the home of little John one day. He had just come out in the yard to play when an old friend of the family came by. Seeing John in the yard he called to him: "Hello, there, sonny; I hear you have twins at your house," whereupon little John exclaimed: "Yes, there were two when I came out, but maybe there are free or four by now."

Vers Libre.

"Vers Libre" (free verse) is so called because of its freedom from the formal laws governing poetic rhythm. It is by no means "new." Walt Whitman wrote almost entirely in "free" cadences, and Milton, to quote one classic example, used what we would call "vers libre" in the choruses of Samson Agonistes. The demand for "complete metrical freedom" stands out, however, as the most obvious element in "the new poetry."

The Orange in Spain.

It is considered a very beautiful thing to cut an orange before breakfast. But who can cut an orange well? One must go to Spain to see that done. The senorita cuts off the rind with her silver knife; then, putting her fork into the peeled fruit, she debones every morsel with her pearly teeth and continues to eat the orange without losing a drop of the juice and lays down the core with the fork still in it.—Exchange.

Same Old Stuff.

A letter from a Babylonian master to his servant 2200 years before Christ, has been translated at the University of Pennsylvania. An accurate report of its contents has not yet reached this office, but this is the tenor of it: "My God! Man! Owing to the present high prices in raw materials, and incidentally the consequent expenses of operation, it is impossible at present to give you the increase in salary you asked for. Do not despair, however. Good service never goes unrewarded.—The Boss."

Job for a Versatile Man.

According to a London paper, the Lady's Magazine for 1780 contained the following comprehensive advertisement: "Wanted, for a sober family, a man of light weight who fears the Lord and can drive a pair of horses. He must occasionally wait at table, join in household prayer, look after horses, and read a chapter in the Bible. He must rise at seven in the morning, obey his master and mistress in all lawful commands, and if he can dress hair, sing psalms, and play at cribbage, so much the better. Wages, fifteen guineas a year."

"Cured"

Mrs. Jay McGee, of Stephenville, Texas, writes: "For nine (9) years, I suffered with 'womanly trouble.' I had terrible headaches, and pains in my back, etc. It seemed as if I would die, I suffered so. At last, I decided to try Cardui, the woman's tonic, and it helped me right away. CHINCH BUG IN 1917.

This Pest Is Threatening Next Year's Crops.

Judging from the numerous complaints being received, it seems evident that chinch bugs are threatening next year's crops.

They seem to be most abundant in the central part of Missouri. Throughout most of the corn and wheat belts of the state there are probably enough bugs to cause severe outbreaks next year if weather conditions should be especially favorable for them. A dry fall and mild winter, with little snow and rain, followed by a dry spring and summer, are the conditions which will favor the pest.

Since it is not possible to know what the coming winter and spring may have in store in the way of favorable or unfavorable weather every farmer should do everything possible to reduce the chance of chinch bug injuries next summer by getting rid of favorable winter quarters. Chinch bugs winter in dry, protected places—meadows, pastures and waste land, in woods, neglected fence rows and similar places. Very few winter in cornfields or in wheatfields. After killing frosts have come select a dry day, when there is not too much wind, and burn over fields, woods and other favorable winter quarters. The heat will kill many of the bugs and expose the rest to the winter and to natural enemies. This pest can be fought successfully only twice during the year—namely, while clustered in winter quarters and while migrating from wheat to corn in the summer.—Missouri Station.

Sanitary Hoghouses.

Though the character usually ascribed to swine is one which gives little or no consideration to cleanliness, still the hog is an animal which will respond very quickly indeed to clean surroundings. The building should be so built that its construction will permit of cleaning and thorough disinfecting. This means smooth walls and floors, for if crevices exist they are only harbors for dirt and vermin. On account of the anatomical construction of the hog its breathing, eating and drinking are done close to the ground and close to a thousand sources of infection. This makes it all the more necessary that its living quarters be cleaned as often and as thoroughly as possible.—K. Ekblow, Illinois Station.

A Coop For Sitting Hens.

Use a heavy goods box, about 12 by 24 inches being a good size for a coop for a single hen. Make a peaked roof, as shown, hinging one-half the roof so that it may be lifted and the hen and the eggs examined from time to time. This will be handy when the eggs are hatching, as the nest can be examined without moving the hen.

The inclosure is of chicken wire and has a board an inch in thickness at the bottom to strengthen it. Put in fresh water and food each day. After the chickens are hatched they may, if it be preferred, be left there to grow up. This coop is easy to close, as it has a trapdoor in place of the usual slide door. In a bigger coop of this sort the nest may be taken out as the chickens grow and roosts put in. This makes a sanitary, portable coop that can be kept free from mites.—Farm Progress.

An Announcement and an Invitation of real importance to you!

WE are pleased to announce that we have contracted to sell the Maxwell Motor Car in this territory.

We have selected the Maxwell because we believe that it comes nearer to being the ideal car for the average family than any other on the market.

We were asked by various manufacturers to represent them in this territory, and before we made a decision we considered them all carefully, comparing the cars point by point, and making sure of the right choice, because you realize that taking the agency for a car means the same to us as the buying of a car does to you.

And we believe it is worth while for us to give you our reasons for the decision we made.

First we found the Maxwell complete—in every possible detail. The engine is modern, simply built, yet extremely powerful and durable. The car is light in weight, but sturdily constructed. There is an abundance of speed. The operation of the car is simple and easy. The light weight and great power, of course, mean economy in gasoline and oil.

Point by point the Maxwell is equal or superior to most cars selling for a few hundred dollars more. There is style, plenty of room for the full number of passengers which each model is rated to carry, and unusual comfort. We were gratified to find these features so pronounced in a low priced car.

The equipment is also complete. There is electric starter and electric lights, demountable rims, one man top, rain-vision windshield—everything the motorist needs for convenience and comfort.

And so when we found how the Maxwell compared in all these points—then considered the price of $595—several hundred dollars lower than any other car offering the same advantages, we were satisfied that it was the best car to sell, because it must be the car that people will want.

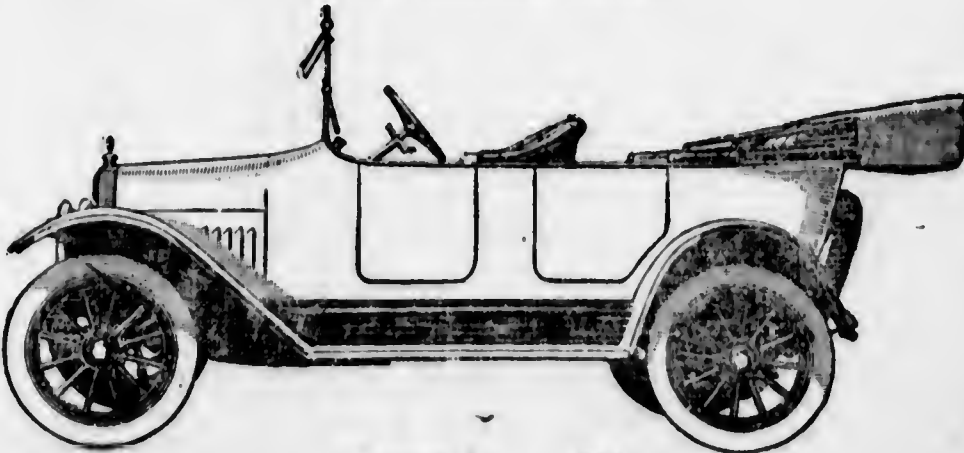

We are fully equipped to give prompt and satisfactory service to Maxwell owners—and we are in a position to make immediate deliveries. We will tell you more about the Maxwell in future advertisements—but meanwhile we invite you to visit our salesroom—and arrange for a demonstration at your convenience.

We are enthusiastic about the Maxwell—but no more so than you will be when you are acquainted with it.
